50 Selected AI Songs for A1

“50 canciones generadas con IA para practicar inglés”

Cincuenta pistas de creación musical con inteligencia artificial, cada una con tres ejercicios originales: Target Verbs, Fill in the Gaps y Listen and Read a Story from Our Class.

La procedencia y titularidad de derechos de estas pistas (descargadas de YouTube) no está confirmada, por lo que — con el mismo criterio de máxima cautela que en el libro de canciones comerciales — este cuaderno no reproduce ninguna letra: solo canal/título y la tarea de escucha.

Los relatos de lectura en voz alta forman parte del mismo universo narrativo del Proyecto Alkayasí que el resto del material, con el alumnado y el profesorado del aula como protagonistas.

¿Por qué canciones en la clase de inglés?

Cuando escucha una canción en inglés antes de completar los ejercicios de esta unidad, no está simplemente disfrutando de una pausa amena entre la gramática y el vocabulario: está entrenando, de la forma más natural posible, aquello que más cuesta desarrollar en cualquier aula de idiomas — el oído. La música ofrece algo que ningún libro de texto puede replicar con la misma eficacia: lengua real, cargada de ritmo, entonación y emoción, repetida una y otra vez hasta quedar grabada en la memoria casi sin esfuerzo consciente.

La idea de usar canciones en la enseñanza de idiomas no es una moda reciente ni una simple estrategia para amenizar la clase. El lingüista Stephen Krashen, en su conocida Hipótesis del Filtro Afectivo, explica que aprendemos mejor cuando la ansiedad es baja y la motivación es alta: un aula relajada, donde el alumnado disfruta de lo que hace, facilita que la lengua "entre" con menos resistencia. Pocas actividades logran ese estado de relajación y disfrute con tanta naturalidad como escuchar y cantar una canción, especialmente entre alumnado adulto que, en muchos casos, regresa al aula después de décadas y llega con cierto recelo hacia el aprendizaje formal. Décadas antes, el psiquiatra y pedagogo búlgaro Georgi Lozanov ya había desarrollado la Sugestopedia, un método que utilizaba deliberadamente la música como herramienta para relajar al alumnado y favorecer la memorización de vocabulario y estructuras. La música, en ambos enfoques, no es un adorno: es un vehículo pedagógico.

Más allá del componente emocional, las canciones son también un recurso privilegiado para trabajar los aspectos orales del idioma, que son precisamente los más difíciles de practicar fuera de un entorno de inmersión real. Cuando cantamos, imitamos de forma inconsciente el ritmo, el acento tónico y la entonación natural del inglés — esos rasgos suprasegmentales que, según numerosos estudios de fonología aplicada a la enseñanza de segundas lenguas, resultan determinantes para que un hablante suene natural y sea comprendido con facilidad, incluso por encima de la pronunciación exacta de cada sonido aislado. Una canción nos obliga a producir enlaces entre palabras, contracciones y reducciones vocálicas —exactamente lo que ocurre en el habla espontánea— de un modo que ningún ejercicio de repetición mecánica consigue igualar. El investigador Tim Murphey, especializado en el uso de canciones en el aula de idiomas, describió este fenómeno como el "efecto de la canción pegadiza" (song-stuck-in-my-head phenomenon): una melodía se instala en la mente y, con ella, la estructura lingüística que transporta, de forma que el alumnado terminará tarareando —y por tanto practicando— el idioma incluso fuera del aula, sin proponérselo.

El ejercicio de lectura en voz alta que acompaña a cada canción de este libro —ya aparezca numerado como Ejercicio 2 o como Ejercicio 3, según la estructura de cada libro— no es casual en su diseño. Después de haber escuchado la canción y trabajado el vocabulario y los verbos de la unidad, el alumnado ya ha estado en contacto con el campo léxico y el tono emocional de la pieza varias veces. Leer el relato en voz alta en ese momento cierra el círculo: convierte la comprensión pasiva en producción oral activa, practicando la pronunciación, el ritmo de las frases y la fluidez de lectura en un texto que ya resulta familiar y cercano, lo que reduce la carga cognitiva y permite centrar la atención en cómo suena la propia voz al hablar inglés. Es, en definitiva, un puente controlado entre escuchar y hablar, dos destrezas que rara vez se entrenan juntas en la enseñanza tradicional de idiomas.

Existe además un argumento relacionado con la memoria a largo plazo. La combinación de melodía, ritmo y repetición favorece lo que la psicolingüística denomina "aprendizaje de secuencias formulaicas": fragmentos de lengua que se memorizan y recuperan como bloques completos, en lugar de palabra por palabra. Es el mismo mecanismo por el que muchas personas recuerdan perfectamente la letra de una canción escuchada por última vez hace veinte años, mientras que olvidan con facilidad una lista de vocabulario estudiada la semana pasada. Aprovechar ese mecanismo natural de la memoria, en lugar de ignorarlo, es sencillamente buena pedagogía.

Conviene aclarar, además, que este razonamiento didáctico es igualmente válido tanto si la canción proviene de un artista o grupo reconocido como si ha sido generada mediante inteligencia artificial. Lo que aporta valor pedagógico no es la fama de quien interpreta la pieza, sino la calidad del insumo lingüístico que contiene: ritmo, entonación, vocabulario y estructuras gramaticales reales, presentadas de forma natural y memorable. Por eso este libro incluye ambos tipos de repertorio con el mismo tratamiento didáctico, sin distinción de estatus entre uno y otro: lo importante es la lengua que transportan, no su origen.

Tampoco puede olvidarse que quien usa este material es, en su inmensa mayoría, alumnado adulto, con toda la particularidad que ello implica. La andragogía, el campo de la pedagogía centrado específicamente en cómo aprenden las personas adultas —desarrollado en profundidad por autores como Malcolm Knowles—, subraya que el alumnado adulto aprende mejor cuando la actividad conecta con su experiencia vital, cuando percibe una utilidad clara y cuando se respeta su autonomía como aprendiz, en lugar de infantilizar el proceso. Las canciones cumplen holgadamente estos tres requisitos: son un terreno común a cualquier generación, tienen una aplicación inmediata y reconocible fuera del aula, y permiten a cada persona implicarse en el grado que le resulte cómodo, ya sea tarareando en silencio o leyendo el relato final en voz alta con total naturalidad.

Por último, no debe subestimarse el valor cultural y motivacional de trabajar con música real. Escuchar canciones —ya sean clásicos conocidos o piezas más recientes— conecta el aprendizaje del idioma con la cultura viva que lo rodea, y recuerda al alumnado adulto que el inglés no es solo una asignatura pendiente, sino una lengua que también se disfruta, se canta y se comparte. Ese componente lúdico, lejos de restar seriedad al aprendizaje, es precisamente lo que sostiene la motivación a largo plazo, tan necesaria en un proceso de aprendizaje permanente como el que se cursa en los centros de Educación Permanente de la Junta de Andalucía.

Por todas estas razones, cada canción de este libro no es un simple complemento de ocio entre unidades de gramática: es una herramienta didáctica deliberada, pensada para trabajar de forma integrada el oído, la pronunciación, la memoria léxica y la motivación del alumnado adulto. Disfrútela como lo que es: una forma agradable, eficaz y profundamente humana de aprender un idioma.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Francisco is seventy-six years old, and next month his first great-grandson is coming to visit from Barcelona. Yesterday, he cleaned the whole house and bought some flowers for the table. In the evening, his daughter called him. She said the baby was born early, and everyone was happy and healthy! Francisco could not speak for a moment. Big tears started to fall down his face, but he was smiling too. His neighbor Carmen saw him through the window and asked, "Are you okay, Francisco?" He laughed and answered, "Yes, Carmen, I am perfect! Sometimes people cry because they are sad, but today I am crying because I am the happiest man in La Cañada!" Carmen hugged him, and they both laughed together in the street.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Every autumn, Julio and Itto like to remember their first year together. Six years ago, Itto started English classes at Alkayasí, and Julio was her teacher. One cold November afternoon, they walked together through the town square for the first time. The leaves were falling, and the sky was grey, but they talked for two hours about their families and their dreams. Yesterday, they walked the same path again. Itto looked at the old café and smiled. "Do you remember our first coffee here?" she asked. Julio nodded and took her hand. "Of course. That day, I knew you were a special person," he said. They sat on the same bench, watched the autumn leaves fall, and felt very grateful for their life together.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last weekend, Consuelo went to visit her sister in Málaga for three days. For the first time in many years, Cristóbal was alone in the house. At first, he felt a little strange without her voice in the kitchen. On Saturday, he decided to cook dinner by himself. He looked in the fridge, found some vegetables and eggs, and made a simple tortilla. It was not perfect, but he felt proud. He also washed all the dishes and cleaned the living room before Consuelo came home. When she arrived, she was surprised. "Did you really do all this alone?" she asked. Cristóbal smiled and said, "Yes! I missed you a lot, but I learned that I can survive without you... for three days, at least!" They both laughed and hugged each other.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Carmen's daughter lives in Germany, and they cannot see each other very often. Some evenings, the house feels very quiet, and Carmen feels a little empty inside. Last Tuesday was one of those evenings. She sat in her armchair and looked at an old photograph of her daughter as a little girl. Suddenly, her phone rang. It was a video call! Her daughter's face appeared on the screen, smiling and waving. They talked for one hour about the weather, the grandchildren, and Carmen's English classes. After the call, Carmen felt completely different. Her heart was full again. She made a cup of tea and thought, "Distance is difficult, but love always finds a way to travel across the world." That night, she slept peacefully, with a happy smile on her face.

Rogelio worked as a doctor for many years, but now he is retired. He has a new hobby: gardening. Every morning, he goes outside and takes care of his tomato plants. While he works, he always hums the same little melody, a song from his childhood in Almería. Yesterday, his neighbor heard him and asked, "What song is that, Rogelio? I don't know it." Rogelio laughed and said, "Nobody knows it! My grandmother sang it to me when I was a small boy, and now I sing it to my tomatoes." His neighbor thought this was very funny, but also very sweet. From that day, every time she passes his garden, she listens for Rogelio's little melody, and it always makes her smile.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Consuelo and Cristóbal have been married for over fifty years. Last month, they celebrated their wedding anniversary with a small family dinner. During the dinner, their grandchildren asked, "What is the secret of a long marriage?" Consuelo looked at Cristóbal for a moment before answering. "Every morning, I look at your grandfather's face, and I still see the young man I fell in love with," she said. Cristóbal smiled and took her hand under the table. "And I still see the most beautiful woman in La Cañada," he added. The grandchildren laughed, but they were also a little moved. That night, walking home, Consuelo thought that after fifty years, some things never change: when she looks at Cristóbal, her heart still feels young.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Pilar's two daughters are studying at university in Granada. Since September, the house has felt very quiet without them. Every Sunday, Pilar calls them on video, and they talk about their classes and their new friends. Last Sunday, her older daughter asked, "Mum, do you miss us a lot?" Pilar smiled and answered honestly, "Every single day, but I am also very proud of both of you." Her daughters told her about a new recipe they wanted to try, and Pilar promised to send them her grandmother's old cookbook. After the call, Pilar felt a little sad, but also happy, because her daughters were becoming independent young women. She looked at their childhood photos on the wall and thought, "They will always be my little girls, wherever they are."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Tarik worked as a waiter in a busy restaurant in Almería for four years. One Friday evening, the restaurant was extremely busy, and Tarik made a small mistake with an order. His colleague got angry and said some unkind words in front of the customers. Tarik felt hurt, and for the rest of the evening, they did not speak to each other. The next morning, before their shift, Tarik decided to talk to his colleague. "I am sorry about yesterday," he said. "It was a difficult night for both of us." His colleague looked surprised, and then smiled. "No, I am sorry too. I should not have shouted at you," he replied. They shook hands and started work together, friends again. Sometimes, Tarik thought, the bravest thing is not winning an argument, but ending it.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Francisco and Carmen have been classmates at Alkayasí for many years. They started English classes together when they were both recently retired, and now they always sit next to each other. Last week, during the final class of the course, the teacher asked the students to say a few words about their experience. Carmen stood up first. "After all these years, English class is not just about grammar for me," she said. "It is about friendship." Francisco nodded and added, "Carmen is right. We have learned many verbs together, but we have also shared many laughs." The other students clapped, and Carmen and Francisco smiled at each other, remembering their very first, nervous day in class, many years before.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Itto finished her cooking course last May, and she was extremely proud. On the day of her final exam, Julio waited outside the school with a small bunch of flowers. When Itto walked out, smiling, Julio was so excited that he did not notice his own car, parked right behind him! He walked backward and bumped into it gently. Itto laughed and said, "Be careful! You look so happy that you cannot see anything!" Julio laughed too and said, "It's true. When I am proud of you, I forget everything else in the world." They celebrated with a special dinner that evening, and Julio told the story to everyone at the table, still a little embarrassed, but very happy about his wife's big achievement.

Every Tuesday, Rogelio helps his elderly neighbor carry her shopping bags up the stairs. She is over ninety years old and lives alone, but she is always cheerful and full of stories. Yesterday, it was raining heavily, and her umbrella broke on the way home. Rogelio saw her from his window and ran outside immediately, without even taking his own coat. He carried her heavy bags, held his umbrella over her head, and walked her safely to her door. She looked at him with grateful eyes and said, "Thank you, Rogelio. You are like a guardian angel to me." Rogelio laughed and answered, "I am just a retired doctor with strong arms, that's all!" But secretly, he felt very proud, and every Tuesday since then, he always checks the weather forecast before her shopping trip.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last month, Pilar had a difficult week. She had three exams for her English course, and her house was full of problems: the washing machine broke, and her car needed new tyres. On Friday evening, she felt extremely tired and a little overwhelmed. Her husband noticed her tired face and, without saying a word, made her a cup of tea and sat next to her on the sofa. He did not talk about the exams or the broken washing machine. He just held her hand and watched a film with her. Pilar looked at him and smiled. "You know," she said, "I don't need a new washing machine or perfect exam results. Some evenings, all I need is a cup of tea and your company." Her husband smiled back and said, "Then you are a very easy woman to make happy."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last weekend, Cristóbal and Consuelo's grandchildren came to visit for two days. The house was full of noise: toys on the floor, cartoons on the television, and children running everywhere. Cristóbal loved every minute of it, but he was also quite tired by Sunday evening. On Monday morning, after Consuelo left for her hairdresser appointment, the house became completely quiet. Cristóbal made himself a coffee, sat in his favourite armchair, and closed his eyes for a moment. He listened to the silence, the birds outside, and his own slow breathing. He thought, "This silence is finally mine, just for one hour." He enjoyed every peaceful minute, and later, when Consuelo came home with fresh bread, he was smiling and completely relaxed, ready for their next noisy family visit.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Francisco's great-grandson often visits him on Saturday mornings. Last Saturday, the little boy was playing with his favourite toy car when it suddenly broke into two pieces. His small face turned red, and he started to cry loudly in the kitchen. Francisco quickly sat down next to him and said gently, "Don't you cry, my boy. Let's see what Grandpa Francisco can do." He took his old toolbox from the cupboard and, with a little glue and patience, he fixed the toy car in ten minutes. The little boy's tears disappeared immediately, and he hugged Francisco tightly. "You can fix everything!" he said happily. Francisco laughed and answered, "Not everything, but I can fix toy cars and sad little faces, and that is enough for today."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Carmen discovered a new hobby last year: painting small watercolour pictures of flowers. Every Wednesday afternoon, she sits at her kitchen table with her paints and brushes. Last Wednesday, she started painting a simple rose, but she completely forgot about the time. Two hours passed, and she did not notice at all! Suddenly, her phone rang. It was her friend from the English class, asking, "Carmen, where are you? The class started thirty minutes ago!" Carmen looked at the clock in shock and said, "Oh no, I completely forgot myself! I will be there in ten minutes!" She grabbed her bag and ran out of the house, laughing at herself. That evening, she told her classmates the whole story, and everyone agreed that a good hobby can make time disappear.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Tarik has many acquaintances at work, but only a few real friends. One of his old friends, from a different job, always calls him only when he needs a favour, but he never has time to meet just to talk. Last month, Tarik felt tired of this situation. He decided to spend more time with his true friends instead: the people who always answer his messages, who remember his birthday, and who ask about his day. Last weekend, he organised a simple barbecue with three close friends from his English class. They talked, laughed, and helped him clean up afterwards, without being asked. Tarik thought, "This is exactly what I need: friends who choose to be here, not friends who only appear when it is convenient for them." He felt lighter and happier than in months.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

One afternoon in October, a heavy storm arrived in La Cañada. The rain fell for almost two hours, and Itto stayed inside, watching through the window. When the rain finally stopped, she decided to go for a short walk before dinner. The streets smelled fresh and clean, and the air felt cooler than before. Suddenly, she saw a beautiful rainbow above the rooftops, with soft colours from red to purple. Itto stood still for a moment, smiling quietly. It reminded her of the rainbows she used to see in Morocco after summer storms, when she was a little girl. She took a photo with her phone and sent it to Julio, with the message: "Look what the rain left behind." That evening, they talked about rainbows from their different countries, and both agreed that some things in nature are the same everywhere.

Majda had an important English test at her evening course, and she felt very nervous the night before. She called her aunt Itto for advice, since Itto always seemed calm before her own exams. "What if I don't remember the verbs?" Majda asked, worried. Itto laughed gently and said, "Majda, you have studied every day this month. Your brain will not let you down." On the day of the test, Majda kept repeating Itto's words in her mind. When the results arrived one week later, Majda had passed with a good mark. She immediately called Itto to share the news. "You were right," Majda said, smiling through the phone. "I didn't let myself down after all." Itto felt very proud of her niece and told her, "The hardest exam is always trusting yourself, and you did it."

One Tuesday morning, Julio's phone rang during breakfast. A friendly voice said, "Hello, is this Angela's house?" Julio, a little confused, answered, "I'm sorry, there is no Angela here. This is Julio." The woman apologised and explained that she had the wrong number. Ten minutes later, the same number called again! This time, Julio answered with a smile and said, "Hello again. Still no Angela here, I'm afraid." They both laughed, and the woman finally noticed her mistake: she had changed one number in her contact list. Later that day, Julio told Itto the funny story at lunch. "I think I need a new name today," he joked. "Julio-slash-Angela, available for wrong numbers only." Itto laughed so much that she almost dropped her cup of tea, and for weeks, she called him "Angela" whenever he answered the phone too quickly.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

For many years, Consuelo worried constantly about her grandchildren: their health, their school marks, their friendships. She often stayed awake at night, thinking about small problems that were not really serious. One day, her daughter told her honestly, "Mum, all this worry is not good for you. You are losing yourself in our lives instead of living your own." At first, Consuelo felt hurt, but she thought about it carefully. She realised her daughter was right. Slowly, she started doing things just for herself again: gardening, English classes, and long walks with Cristóbal. She still loved her family deeply, of course, but she stopped carrying every small worry as her own. "Loving my family does not mean losing myself," she told her daughter later. "I understand that now, and I feel much happier."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Pilar keeps a big biscuit tin in her kitchen, always full of homemade cookies for visitors. Last Thursday, her English classmates came to her house to study together before an exam. When Pilar opened the tin to serve the biscuits, she found it completely empty! "I'm hollow!" she said, laughing, holding up the empty tin. Everyone looked confused for a second, and then they understood: her teenage son had eaten every single biscuit the night before, without saying anything. Pilar shook her head and said, "Well, I baked forty biscuits on Sunday, and my son ate them all alone in four days!" Her classmates laughed and offered to bring snacks instead. In the end, they studied verbs with tea and other people's biscuits, and Pilar promised to hide the next batch in a very secret place.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last Monday, Carmen arrived at her English class looking very tired but also very amused. Her classmates asked if she was okay. "I am fine," she said, "but I had the strangest dream last night!" In her dream, she was taking her English exam, but the teacher was actually her own cat, wearing glasses and holding a red pen! In the dream, the cat kept saying, "Miau, wrong verb, try again," every time Carmen answered a question. Everyone in the classroom laughed loudly when Carmen described the story with dramatic hand movements. Francisco said, "Maybe your cat wants extra biscuits for correcting your homework!" Carmen laughed too and admitted that even in her dreams, she could not stop thinking about irregular verbs. "I think I need a holiday from English," she joked, "even my dreams are giving me homework now!"

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Every Sunday afternoon, after a big family lunch, Cristóbal sits in the garden with his eyes closed, listening to the birds. Consuelo always says he is sleeping, but Cristóbal insists he is just "resting his eyes." Last Sunday, their grandson tried to test this theory. He quietly placed a paper hat on Cristóbal's head and took a photograph. A minute later, Cristóbal opened one eye and said, "I saw that, you know." Everyone in the garden burst out laughing, including Cristóbal himself. "See?" he told Consuelo proudly. "I told you I wasn't really sleeping!" Consuelo just smiled and shook her head. "Eyes closed or not," she said, "you always know exactly what is happening around you." Cristóbal closed his eyes again, satisfied, while the paper hat stayed on his head for the rest of the afternoon.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

While cleaning an old drawer last weekend, Rogelio found his stethoscope from his very first year as a doctor, over forty years ago. He held it carefully and remembered his old hospital, his first patients, and the young nurse who later became his wife. Many things had changed since then: new hospitals, new machines, new doctors. But some memories remained perfectly clear in his mind, like his very first successful operation. Rogelio decided to keep the stethoscope in a small wooden box, instead of the drawer. That evening, he showed it to his grandson, who was curious about medicine. "This little tool remembers many stories," Rogelio told him, "even the ones I sometimes forget myself." His grandson listened carefully, and for a moment, Rogelio felt like a young doctor again, full of hope for the future.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

After a long shift at the restaurant, Tarik likes to walk along the beach before going home. Last Friday, he finished work later than usual, just as the sun was setting behind the mountains. He walked slowly, watching his own shadow become longer and longer on the sand. Near the old fishing boats, he met his friend from the English class, who was also walking alone that evening. They sat together where the long shadows of the boats met the shadow of the lighthouse, and they talked about their week: work, exams, and small worries. The conversation was calm and easy, without any hurry. When it became completely dark, they walked back together, feeling lighter. Tarik thought that sometimes the best conversations happen exactly there, in the quiet space where shadows meet and the day slowly ends.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Every Friday evening, Francisco, Cristóbal, and Rogelio meet at a small bar near the square to play cards and talk about football. Last Friday, a young street musician came in and asked politely if he could sing one song. The bar was noisy, with many conversations and clinking glasses, but as soon as he began singing, something strange happened: everyone stopped talking. Francisco put down his cards, Cristóbal forgot his coffee, and Rogelio simply listened with his eyes closed. The young man's voice was simple, but full of feeling, and for three minutes, the whole bar was completely silent. When the song finished, everyone clapped enthusiastically, and the owner gave the musician a free drink. "I have never seen this bar so quiet," Rogelio said, surprised. Cristóbal nodded and added, "Some songs are stronger than forty conversations at once."

One evening, while watching a documentary about the Sahara Desert, Itto became very quiet. Julio noticed and asked softly, "What are you thinking about?" Itto smiled and said, "The desert near my family's town in Morocco. The sand, the silence, the incredible stars at night. It feels far away now, but it is always close to my heart." Julio took her hand and asked her to tell him more, so Itto described the golden dunes, the cold desert nights, and the warm tea her family shared under the sky. Julio listened carefully, imagining every detail. "One day," he said, "I would love to see that desert with you." Itto squeezed his hand and answered, "Then one day, I will show you exactly why it never really leaves my heart, no matter how far away I live." They continued watching the documentary together, closer than before.

On cold winter evenings, Carmen loves sitting near her small electric heater with a cup of hot chocolate and a good book. Last Tuesday, after a busy day of shopping and housework, she finally sat down at eight o'clock, completely exhausted. She turned on the heater, put on her favourite music very quietly, and opened her book. For one hour, she did not think about her shopping list, her English homework, or her telephone messages. She simply enjoyed the warmth and the silence of her living room. Her sister called later that evening and asked, "What did you do today?" Carmen smiled and answered, "Not very much, but it was exactly what I needed. Sometimes peace is not about doing something special. It is just about sitting quietly, feeling warm, and forgetting the world for one hour."

The morning after a big family celebration at home, Consuelo woke up early and went downstairs to clean the living room. The house was quiet after the noise and laughter of the night before: empty plates, a few forgotten glasses, and the fireplace full of yesterday's embers, now cold and grey. Consuelo swept the ashes carefully into a metal bucket, remembering the warm fire, the music, and her grandchildren's laughter from the evening before. She smiled, thinking that a house full of cold ashes in the morning always meant a house full of joy the night before. Cristóbal came downstairs and found her smiling at the empty fireplace. "What are you thinking about?" he asked. Consuelo answered, "Just how much I love mornings like this: tired, a little messy, but full of good memories from yesterday."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Every school morning at Pilar's house is a little chaotic. Two daughters getting ready, one dog wanting breakfast, and a husband looking everywhere for his car keys. Last Monday was especially busy: one daughter could not find her homework, the toaster stopped working, and the dog escaped into the garden in the rain! Pilar ran between rooms, shouting instructions, making sandwiches, and drying the wet dog with a towel, all at the same time. Somehow, everyone left the house on time, a little wet but smiling. Later, while drinking her coffee alone in the quiet kitchen, Pilar laughed to herself, remembering the whole scene. "This morning was completely crazy," she thought, "but it was also beautiful, in its own strange way." She decided that mornings like this, full of noise and small disasters, were simply part of a happy family life.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

After forty years of working in a noisy factory, Francisco now enjoys something he never had before: complete silence. Every morning, before the rest of the town wakes up, he sits on his terrace with a cup of coffee and listens to nothing at all: no machines, no telephones, no meetings. Just the quiet sound of the early morning. Yesterday, his son asked him, "Dad, don't you get bored with all this silence?" Francisco smiled and shook his head. "For forty years, I dreamed about mornings like this," he said. "Now I finally have time to hear the sound of nothing, and honestly, it is one of the most beautiful sounds I know." His son looked at him thoughtfully and, the next morning, sat down quietly beside his father, sharing the silence and the coffee without saying a word.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Consuelo's granddaughter, aged sixteen, often worries about small things: a difficult exam, an argument with a friend, or a photograph she does not like on social media. Last week, she visited Consuelo, looking upset about a minor mistake in her homework. Consuelo listened patiently and then said, "My dear, not every small mistake needs to be fixed immediately. Sometimes, it is better to just let it be." Her granddaughter looked confused, so Consuelo explained further. "When I was your age, I worried about everything too. Now, at seventy-four, I understand that most small problems solve themselves, if you give them time." Her granddaughter thought about this for a moment and finally smiled. "Maybe you are right, Grandma," she said. "Let it be." From that day, whenever something small went wrong, they both simply repeated those three words to each other.

Last Saturday, Tarik visited a friend's family for lunch. Their young son was celebrating his fifth birthday, and Tarik wanted to bring a small present. In the toy shop, he saw hundreds of colourful toys, but he finally chose a very simple wooden car, nothing expensive or complicated. When he gave it to the boy, the child looked at it for a moment and then smiled enormously. He spent the whole afternoon pushing the little car across the floor, making engine noises, completely happy. Tarik's friend said, "You know, he has many expensive toys with lights and sounds, but he always prefers the simple ones." Tarik laughed and answered, "Sometimes, a good present is not about how much it costs. It is just a toy, but for a five-year-old boy, it can be a whole adventure." He left the party feeling unexpectedly proud.

Cristóbal often walks his old dog, Rex, along the beach in the early evening. Last winter, a very strong wind was blowing, and Rex ran ahead, chasing seagulls near the water. Suddenly, Cristóbal could not see him anywhere among the rocks. He walked quickly, calling loudly, "Rex! Rex!" but the strong wind seemed to carry his voice in every direction except the right one. After ten worried minutes, he finally heard barking behind some fishing boats, and there was Rex, happily digging in the sand. Cristóbal sat down, relieved, and clipped the lead back onto his collar. "The wind still called your name," he told Rex, "but you were much too busy to listen, weren't you?" Rex simply wagged his tail and looked up innocently. Since that day, Cristóbal always keeps his dog closer whenever the wind is strong near the shore.

Julio and Rogelio support different football teams, and every derby weekend, their friendly rivalry becomes very entertaining for the rest of the class. Last Sunday, Julio's team lost an important match, and Rogelio could not stop smiling about it on Monday morning. "Don't worry, Julio," Rogelio said, laughing. "There is always next season." Julio shook his head and answered seriously, "I have supported this team since I was seven years old. Win or lose, I will love them till I die!" Rogelio laughed even harder and said, "That is either true love or true madness, my friend." The other students joined the conversation, sharing stories about their own favourite teams from childhood. In the end, everyone agreed that football loyalty, like Julio's, often makes very little logical sense, but it always makes for a good story on a Monday morning.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Every August, before the new school year begins, Itto likes to visit Alkayasí to help Julio prepare the classroom. The building feels completely different in summer: the hollow rooms are quiet, the desks are empty, and there is no laughter in the corridors. Walking through the empty classroom, Itto remembered her very first day there, many years ago, feeling nervous and excited at the same time. She helped Julio clean the whiteboard and arrange the chairs in neat rows. "It feels strange, doesn't it?" she said. "So quiet now, but soon it will be full of voices again." Julio nodded and smiled. "I always like this quiet moment before September," he said. "It reminds me how much I look forward to the new students arriving." A week later, the same hollow rooms were full of life again, exactly as they both expected.

Last Wednesday, Carmen was doing her shopping in town when she suddenly realised the time: her English class started in only five minutes, and the bus stop was quite far away! She quickly paid for her groceries and started walking as fast as she could, almost running through the busy street. She could see the bus already waiting at the stop, ready to leave. "Wait, please wait!" she shouted, running with her heavy shopping bags. The driver saw her through the mirror and kindly waited an extra few seconds. Carmen arrived completely out of breath, but smiling with relief. "Thank you so much," she said, sitting down finally. When she told her classmates the story later, Francisco laughed and said, "Carmen, you should try running every day. It might help with your football skills too!" Everyone laughed, and Carmen promised to leave home earlier next time.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last month, Consuelo and Cristóbal had a small disagreement about their holiday plans: she wanted the mountains, and he preferred the coast, as always. They discussed it for almost an hour, without any real agreement, and finally decided to stop talking about it for the evening. Later, while watching television together on the sofa, Cristóbal quietly took Consuelo's hand, without saying a single word. She looked at him, and after a moment, she rested her head on his shoulder. Neither of them mentioned the holiday again that night. The next morning, over breakfast, Consuelo simply said, "Let's go to the coast this year, and the mountains next year." Cristóbal smiled and answered, "That sounds perfect." Sometimes, after fifty years together, they both understood that words are not always necessary; a quiet hand and a shared silence can say more than any argument.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

On Saturday morning, Pilar opened her fridge to prepare breakfast and found it almost completely empty: no milk, no eggs, and only a very old piece of cheese. Her family had eaten everything during the week without telling her! Instead of feeling frustrated, Pilar decided to make it into a small adventure. She looked through her cupboards and found some flour, sugar, and a few apples. "Well," she said to her surprised family, "today we are having something different: apple pancakes, made from almost nothing!" Everyone helped: her husband mixed the batter, her daughters cut the apples, and together they cooked breakfast as a team. The pancakes were delicious, and the empty fridge became a funny family story instead of a problem. Later that day, Pilar wrote "milk, eggs, cheese" on a shopping list, adding at the bottom: "just in case we run out of adventures too."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Itto's mother taught her many traditional recipes when she was young, but she never wrote down the exact amounts: just a little of this, a handful of that. Last weekend, Itto wanted to cook her mother's special bread for Julio's birthday, but she had no written recipe to follow. At first, she felt worried, but as soon as she started mixing the flour and warm water with her hands, something changed. Her hands seemed to remember the right amount, the right texture, even without exact measurements. "How did you know exactly how much water to add?" Julio asked, watching curiously. Itto smiled and answered, "I don't really know with my mind, but my soul remembers my mother's hands doing exactly this, many years ago." The bread turned out perfectly, warm and delicious, carrying a little piece of her mother's kitchen all the way to Almería.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last month, one of Francisco and Carmen's classmates, a friendly woman from their English group, told everyone she was moving to Madrid to live closer to her son. On her last day of class, everyone brought small snacks, and Julio gave a short, warm speech about her time at Alkayasí. When it was time to say goodbye, Carmen hugged her tightly and said, "It won't be the same without you here." Francisco added, smiling but a little emotional, "Madrid is not so far, my friend. We will see you again, I am sure of it." They exchanged phone numbers and promised to send messages every week. Two months later, their friend visited La Cañada for a weekend, and the whole class organised a small reunion lunch. "You see?" Francisco said happily. "I told you we would see you again."

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

After Cristóbal complained about a stiff back for several weeks, Rogelio, who was a doctor for many years, suggested some simple daily exercises: gentle stretching, short walks, and slow breathing. At first, Cristóbal was not very convinced. "I am seventy-four years old, Rogelio, not an athlete," he said, laughing. But he decided to try it anyway, every morning for one month. Slowly, something changed: he could bend down more easily, and his back pain almost disappeared. One morning, after finishing his stretches in the garden, Cristóbal said proudly, "Rogelio, come and feel this. My back feels completely different now!" Rogelio smiled and answered, "That's not magic, my friend, that's just your own body, finally moving properly again." Cristóbal nodded, grateful, and from that day, he never missed his morning exercises, always remembering Rogelio's simple advice.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

On quiet evenings, Julio and Itto often sit together on the sofa, each one reading their own book, without talking very much. At first, years ago, Itto thought this silence meant something was wrong between them. One evening, she finally asked Julio, "Are you upset with me? We haven't talked in almost an hour." Julio looked up, surprised, and smiled gently. "Not at all," he said. "I love these quiet moments with you, just as much as our conversations." Itto thought about this for a moment and realised she felt exactly the same way. From that evening, she stopped worrying about their comfortable silences. Now, whenever they sit together reading, occasionally touching hands or exchanging a small smile, Itto feels a deep, calm kind of love, the kind that does not always need words to feel completely real.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

When Consuelo was young, before she met Cristóbal, she used to dance every summer at the village fiestas near Serón, wearing a bright yellow dress her mother made for her. Last week, while cleaning an old wardrobe, she found a faded photograph from one of those golden evenings: young faces, simple music, and pure happiness. She showed the photograph to her granddaughter, who looked at it curiously. "Was life simpler then, Grandma?" the girl asked. Consuelo thought carefully before answering. "Simpler, yes, but not always easier," she said. "We just knew how to enjoy small things: a song, a dance, a warm evening with friends." Her granddaughter kept the photograph on her bedside table afterwards, saying she wanted to remember that golden days were not about the past being perfect, but about appreciating happy moments, then and now.

Before an important family wedding last spring, Pilar spent the whole afternoon trying on different dresses, feeling increasingly frustrated. Nothing seemed exactly right for the occasion. Finally, she chose a simple blue dress and walked nervously into the living room, asking her husband, "Well, what do you think?" Her husband looked up from his newspaper, smiled warmly, and said, "You're beautiful, exactly as you are. You always worry too much about these things." Pilar felt a little embarrassed but very happy. At the wedding, several friends complimented her dress, but what she remembered most was her husband's simple, honest comment at home. Later that evening, dancing together at the celebration, she whispered, "Thank you for this afternoon." He looked confused for a second, then smiled, understanding exactly what she meant, without needing any further explanation.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

In the first week of December, Julio suggested decorating the classroom for the upcoming Christmas holidays. Everyone brought something from home: Francisco brought an old string of little lights from his garage, Carmen brought paper stars, and Consuelo and Cristóbal brought a small artificial tree. Pilar's daughters helped cut out snowflakes, while Tarik carefully arranged the lights around the window, testing every bulb twice. When they finally turned off the main lights and switched on the little decorations, the whole classroom looked warm and magical, with soft colours reflecting on everyone's happy faces. "It looks beautiful," Itto said quietly, holding a cup of hot chocolate someone had brought. Rogelio raised his cup and said, "To another year of learning together, in this little school full of little lights." Everyone smiled, feeling grateful for their small, cheerful classroom community.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Majda found an old ceramic vase in a small second-hand shop in Almería, slightly chipped but with a beautiful simple shape. At home, it stood empty on her shelf for several weeks, and she often looked at it, unsure what to do with it. One afternoon, walking home from her evening course, she passed a small flower stall and, without really planning it, bought a handful of white daisies. Back home, she filled the hollow vase carefully, arranging the flowers one by one. Suddenly, the empty, forgotten object became something graceful and alive on her shelf. She took a photograph and sent it to her aunt Itto, writing simply: "Look what a few flowers can do." Itto replied with a heart emoji and the words: "Sometimes emptiness is just waiting quietly for something beautiful to arrive." Majda smiled, looking again at her small, transformed corner of the room.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

Last Easter, Francisco bought a large decorated chocolate egg for his great-grandchildren, the biggest one in the shop, covered in colourful paper and ribbons. The children's eyes grew enormous with excitement when they saw it on the table. When the youngest boy finally broke it open, expecting to find sweets and small toys inside, he looked confused. "It's completely empty, Grandpa! It's so hollow!" he said, disappointed. Francisco laughed and explained gently, "Chocolate eggs are usually hollow inside, my boy. The chocolate itself is the present!" The children looked at each other and then started laughing too, a little embarrassed by their own expectations. They shared the chocolate happily among themselves, and Francisco promised to check next year's egg for a small surprise hidden inside as well, just to be safe. "Hollow chocolate," he told his daughter later, "but a very solid family memory."

While organising some old boxes in his garage, Rogelio found a collection of photographs from his years working at the hospital: colleagues in white coats, retirement parties, and even a photograph of his very first day, looking young and nervous. He sat down on an old chair and looked through them slowly, remembering names and faces from many years before. Some colleagues had moved to different cities or retired long ago, but their memories lingered clearly in his mind, as if it all happened only yesterday. His wife found him there an hour later, still looking at the photographs with a thoughtful smile. "Lost in the past?" she asked gently. Rogelio shook his head and answered, "Not lost, just visiting for a while. These memories remind me why I chose medicine in the first place." He carefully put the photographs into a proper album that same evening.

EXERCISE 3 · LISTEN AND READ A STORY FROM OUR CLASS

At the end-of-course celebration at Alkayasí, Julio organised a small party for all the students and their families. As a surprise, he hired a friendly street performer dressed as a clown to entertain the children who came along. The clown made simple jokes, small magic tricks, and funny faces, and soon all the children were laughing loudly, including Pilar's youngest niece and Francisco's great-grandson. At one point, during a particularly funny trick with disappearing sweets, the clown pretended to cry enormous, exaggerated tears because the sweets had "vanished forever." The children laughed so hard that some adults, including Consuelo and Carmen, started laughing too, wiping real tears of joy from their own eyes. Julio watched the whole scene from the classroom door, feeling proud of his little community. "A clown who cried," he thought, "but really, everyone here is crying today from pure happiness."
